BLUE HDi DIESEL | SELECTIVE CATALYTIC REDUCTION TECHNOLOGY

Blue HDi technology represents a major step forward for Groupe PSA in the reduction of pollutant emissions. It accomplishes up to a 90% reduction in NOx emission and a 2% to 4% reduction in CO<sub>2</sub> emissions compared to conventional diesel engines. The Blue HDi techonology composes of

- An oxidation catalyst that converts unburned hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide into water and carbon dioxide.
- An additive particulate filter that eliminates 99.9% of particulates by number, regardless of their size and driving conditions, and
- The employment of Selective Catalytic Reduction Techonology.

WHAT IS SELECTIVE CATALYTIC REDUCTION (SCR)?

SCR is a technology system that injects AdBlue through a special catalyst into the exhaust stream of a diesel engine. The SCR works by injecting a common urea solution known as the AdBlue into the system.

WHAT IS ADBLUE AND HOW IT WORKS

AdBlue is a solution that reacts with the nitrogen oxide gas and breaks it down into harmless nitrogen and oxygen, thereby reducing the pollutant emission into the environment.

WHAT YOU NEED TO DO?

The AdBlue in your vehicle can last for approximately 6,000km after which you can top up at any of our servise centres below with no prior service appointment required, to ease your convenience:
